Do you suffer from vague stomach discomfort?

There can be many causes for stomach complaints. The problems may show themselves as different symptoms which may be caused, for instance, by lack of acid or the presence of too much acid in the stomach. It is important to determine the underlying cause of stomach complaints, because problems such as lack of acid in the stomach may lead to other stomach illnesses and digestion disorders. If you suffer from vague stomach problems, take the GastroPanel test. The test will show if your stomach is healthy or not. It is easy, painless and only involves a blood test.

Do you have these symptoms?

Stomach complaints appear as:

- stomach pain or a burning feeling
- heartburn
- bloating
- feeling of heaviness in the stomach area
- nausea
- vomiting

When should a stomach health test be taken?

By taking the GastroPanel test you can easily find out possible causes for stomach complaints. The blood sample based test establishes whether your symptoms are related to the condition of your stomach lining. It is also worthwhile taking the test if you want to check the health of your stomach quickly and safely.

The results will show the health of your stomach and warn you if there is a need for further examination.

GastroPanel is a painless test based on a blood sample. In addition to the assessment of the state of health of the stomach lining, the test also shows any potential Helicobacter pylori infection, atrophy of the stomach lining or lack of acid. GastroPanel test also helps to evaluate the risk of any deficiency of vitamin B12, as well as several trace minerals. Test results will help to choose potential further examinations and treatment. Always consult your general practitioner regarding the test results and before taking any further action.
